Register To-day!
So far the registration for the election of November 2 has been discouragingly light. It testifies to a popular lack of appreciation of the important questions to be submitted to the electors, and threatens to leave their decision to a comparatively small fraction of citizens qualified to vote. A partial and imperfect record of public sentiment on the Constitution, woman suffrage and the barge canal bond issue of $27,000,000 is in prospect.

It is still possible to bring the number of names on the poll list up to a respectable total. The registration places will be open to-day from 7 o'clock in the morning until 10:30 o'clock at night. For the first and only time this year the officers will be on duty all day, completing their work, and when they close their books at night the opportunity for registration this year will end.

More important than the election of any individual to office, more far-reaching in its consequences, will be the outcome of this year's balloting; and this Saturday, October 9, is the last day on which citizens can perform the essential preliminary act in the discharge of their highest duty.

Jail the Firebugs.
Fires in this city had a tax of $144 on every man, woman and child in the community last year. This is the result reached in computations made by the Fire Commissioner; and three-quarters of the loss is directly traceable to fires resulting from carelessness. This is not a generalization arrived at by guess work. It is a statement substantiated by Fire Department records, which show that:

"Carelessness with matches caused 1,248 fires last year, costing you a share of $192,918; defective stoves, furnaces and heating plants caused 925 fires, costing $263,897; sparks from chimneys &c. caused 795 fires, costing $147,268; carelessness with gas, lights, stoves, &c. caused 749 fires, costing $99,829."

On this Fire Prevention Day Fire Commissioner ADAMSON asks every resident of New York to assume the duties of a fire prevention inspector: to examine the premises he occupies and rid them of fire hazards; and to refrain from negligence that might result in a fire. Nor does he limit himself to a request for the exercise of ordinary prudence and intelligence. He presents another aspect of this important matter:

"The courts have decided that persons can be held responsible for negligence and damages from fires resulting from their culpable carelessness."

"We have recently installed a Bureau of Fire Investigation. Each fire will be investigated and the cause ascertained."

"The last person leaving the house where a fire has occurred will be closely questioned with a view to fixing responsibility for such fire."

"Both civil and criminal actions in cases of fires are to be prosecuted rigorously."

If those who start fires through inattention to common caution will not voluntarily amend their ways, the authorities have means to punish them, and a few prosecutions culminating in jail sentences would convince the most heedless that they should not destroy their neighbors' property.

The Invasion of Serbia.
With an Austro-German army breaking over the northern and western border of Serbia, a Bulgarian force menacing her eastern frontier and an Anglo-French expedition advancing up the Vardar valley to her aid, the war returns to its original scenes. Serbia's most vulnerable border is the northern, the low level valleys of the Save and Danube. The steep, rugged defiles of the Drina furnish a natural defence on the west. On the east, with an evident mistrust of Bulgaria, she has strongly fortified Ploer, on the Orient railroad a few miles from the Bulgarian frontier, and she has built fortifications commanding all of the passes. The more recently acquired frontier, to the south, running along mountains and the edge of high cliffs, is in a measure a natural defence against invasion of the Vardar valley. Here the Serbians won their victory over the Turks at Kumanova and Kopriv in the first Balkan war and in the second defeated the Bulgarians in the desperate encounter at Bregalniza.

The Orient railroad, the only important overland route from Western Europe to Constantinople, is the great objective of the Teutonic invaders. The Serbians have announced that they will make their defence in the mountains of the interior. This appears the only tactics for their army of not more than 250,000 against a northern invasion. It proved effective in the former advance of the Austrians when, after the Serbians had been driven into the heart of their country, they turned upon their foe and drove him with great loss beyond the Danube. In order to protect the rear of this defensive force it devolves upon the Anglo-French troops to guard against Bulgarian attack on the railway through the Vardar valley, for upon this depend all Serbia's supplies as well as the arrival of any forces that the Allies may send to her aid.

Serbia, alone, although her army is said to be in excellent condition, and the small expeditionary force sent by the Allies could hardly be expected to defeat the Teutonic and Bulgarian forces. CONSTANTINE, according to report, has refused to be bound by the treaty with Serbia. But it remains a problem if he can overcome the evident pro-Ally sympathy of his people. Rumania, it has been announced, would remain neutral, but at the same time reports indicate that she is mobilizing her troops on the Bulgarian frontier. Again, there remains a doubt as to the enthusiasm with which the Bulgarians will take part in a war against Russia, which many of them consider their natural ally. Greece or Rumania could in the present crisis do much to decide the success or failure of the Teuton drive, but that either will participate in the war is mere speculation.

The movement is one of the most important of the war because of its possible effect. Upon it hangs not only the fate of Turkey and Constantinople, but Teutonic success would open the way across Asia Minor to Bagdad and India and imperil the French, Italian and British possessions of North Africa.

Each new revelation, every added detail of the Armenian atrocities discloses fresh horrors—and only in one nation are defenders found for the conduct of the Turks. Can it be that in Berlin there are men so obsessed that they desire to confirm the words of JOSEPH H. CHORSE, who on September 30 said in a public address:

"Putting these two reports of his (Lord Bryce) together, with the two nations whom he indicated, they are exactly alike."

"If you scratch one of them, you find the blood of the other underneath."

"You scratch the other and you find the blood of one underneath."

"There is no possibility of distinguishing them in character or conduct."

That defence of the Turk and apology for the extermination of the Armenians is not the purpose of all Teutons, the procedure of the German and Austrian Ambassadors at Constantinople bears testimony. They recognized the dreadful inhumanity, the cumulative horror of the Turk's course; and from the Grand Vizier they demanded a written certificate of their nations' innocence in the massacres. "They, on the ground, and intimately acquainted with the plan of wholesale murder, could not take the stand of VOX REVERENTIO in Berlin, who holds the extermination of a race to be 'not only the right, but the duty' of the Turks."

Mr. CHORSE's words to the Pilgrims recur to mind with a terrible significance. Did he correctly designate the allies of the Turk?

Proposed Platform for a New Party.
We beg leave to suggest the following as the entire and adequate declaration of principles by a party of American citizens including Democrats, Republicans, Progressives, Prohibitionists and every other sect in good and regular standing:

"Prosperity first and politics afterward."

This has especial reference to the adjustment of the tariff to new conditions brought about by the great war in Europe.

The nation's opportunity is as obvious as the sun in the morning sky. Are the partisan leaders, and particularly the leaders of the party now in power at Washington, going to sacrifice the sunshine for the sake of personal pride of opinion or the dim echoes of past declarations, or canned creed of any kind?

Bad for America if this is the case. Mr. WILSON, Mr. UNDERWOOD and others:

Bad for America if this is the case. Mr. MANN, Mr. LODGE and others:

What a chance to wipe the slate clean of preconceived notions and conventional formulae regarding the legitimate use of tariff taxation for the promotion of American industries, infant or otherwise!

"Politics afterward and prosperity first."

Battle Cruisers for the Navy.
It was a foregone conclusion when Admiral BEATTY's warships, led by the 30 knot Tiger, sank the Blücher and mauled other cruisers of the German raiding squadron in the North Sea fight, that our Navy Department would be powerfully impressed. After the conference between President WILSON, Secretary DANIELS and Chairman PAGET of the House Naval Committee on Monday at the White House it was reported that battle cruisers would be recommended as units of the new construction.

It may be observed that Secretary MERRY in his last report three years ago brought the battle cruiser to the attention of Congress. Unfortunately the General Board then declared for an all battleship programme. If Mr. MERRY had received its support and the Naval Committee had fallen into line, we should now have two or more battle cruisers in commission.

The naval lesson of the war is that battle cruisers and ocean going submarines are indispensable to an effective modern navy. We shall now have the best that can be built; only the number is in doubt. It is to be feared that counsels of nervous economy will determine in favor of a minimalist of battle cruisers: two at most in the new construction. There should be at least four ships, making a homogeneous squadron.

In Washington the amateurs impulsively assert that our battle cruisers will beat all creation in speed and gun power. The British Tiger with her thirty knots is to be slow by comparison. Nothing under thirty-five knots will be approved. And yet we have no torpedo boat as fast as that. Naval constructors will not be so sure about the thirty-five knot battle cruiser. If a cruiser were to have that speed it would be at the expense of armor and gun calibre. Her fuel would of course be oil. The armor would be cut down, but we must have the heavy, long range guns as well as the speed.

It would be an intricate problem for our naval constructors to combine a speed of thirty-five knots with main battery of 14 inch guns. The amateurs will have to stand aside and let them make their own calculations. Perhaps the thirty-five knots can be managed, but it is not so important to beat all creation for a flying if a late start as to make sure of a squadron of swift and powerful cruisers like the Tiger.

A newly discovered planet in the constellation of Pisces is reported to have a "rapid retrograde movement." Possibly it is "directed as follows: Reasonably it is a more advantageous position."

A staggering blow was dealt tonight to the festivities of the gay element when the authorities stopped dancing at the Savoy Hotel—Cable news.

At last are the horrors of war brought home to London.

The Hon. JOE WALKER of Massachusetts in progressing back to the Republican party and announcing that he will support its candidate for Governor said: "I was a progressive before the Progressive party was established. I am a progressive to-day." Which being translated means that he is for JOE WALKER, first, last and all the time, although he does not always see in which direction his interests lie.

Field Marshal von Hindenburg in reply to the felicitations of Count Schenk, president of the "Prussian Parliament," expressed the following: "The Lord God in the future will continue to be with our arms"—Berlin dispatch.

If the confidence of the German strategists should prove to be misplaced it would be instructive to see how they accounted for the triumph of the Allies.

Before the world's championship series began the mighty ALEXANDER FORTY, president of the "Prussian Parliament," expressed the following: "The Lord God in the future will continue to be with our arms"—Berlin dispatch.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE SUN—Sir: It was a great surprise to me to read in THE SUN of October 7 a letter, "Japan's American Policy," by one who signed himself "American." The writer of it makes the assertion that the Japanese press at home is carrying on a campaign to educate the people to look upon America as their next enemy. To prove the truth of this assertion, he resuscitated the Turtle Bay story. And he ingeniously connected the wrecking of the liner, the fact that the Japanese press at home is carrying on a campaign to educate the people to look upon America as their next enemy.
